Packing order in civil services is determined by the year of entry. Older the number of entry, senior an officer becomes. Each individual officer from the entry into service onwards gains diverse experiences at various levels till his/ her exit from the service. Most of the civil servants share their experiences at the personal level in the form of their memoirs. There are very few and far references in the public policy domain of sharing practical experiences in an objective manner. In the annals of the Indian civil services, it is for the first time that Ten officers of a batch had come together to share their experiences with constructive suggestions on a number of important issues. This kind of canvas covering wide-ranging subjects will be helpful to present and future policymakers and implementers. The topics covered and the authors involved make the book a sheer magic.

This paper examines the growth, geographic distribution, and quality concerns of medical education in India, particularly in the private sector. It is observed that an important feature of the considerable growth of medical education experienced in India, especially after the 1990s, is the significant growth of private medical education. During the last two and a half decades (1990 to 2014), private medical colleges have increased by 405 percent compared to 72 per cent for government medical colleges and currently, private sector owns more than half of the total medical schools and student enrollments. Interestingly, this growth has occurred primarily in economically better-off and healthier states of India (having three-fourth of the total private medical colleges), while the low-income states are lagging behind though they have poor health indicators. The unequal distribution of medical colleges has resulted regional differences in the access to doctors in the country. Also, there are concerns about the quality of medical graduates produced from the private institutions. The paper suggests policy actions for correcting geographical imbalances in the production and distribution of medical graduates and increasing the density of quality doctors in India. Role of Private Sector in Medical Education and Human Resource Development For Health in India Blue Rose Publishers Dedicated to Our

Honourable PM - Sh. Narendra Modi. and All Member of Exams Exclusive Family In this Book we cover most important topic from previous Month with detailed Analysis Helpfull in prepration of UPSC,SSC and many other Exams Reflections on India's Public Policies: by India's Experienced Policy makers Diamond Pocket Books Pvt Ltd Glimpses in the field of medical education and practice of surgery in the 1950 s and sixties in India in general and Madras in particular, from the perspective of a medical aspirant are presented in this book. A skinny boy of 17/18 years from a rural background enters the capital city of Madras, travelling by train for the first time and seeking admission in a Government Medical College had to face various types of problems. Vivid description of the hassles faced by him in getting admitted into Stanley Medical College and the Men's Hostel makes interesting reading. Friction between the 'freshers' and the 'seniors' and the initial instances of ragging had to be faced before being accepted into the happy ambience of life of a medico. Medicine, Surgery and Obstetrics & Gynaecology were the three main basic specialities those days. The evolution of General Surgery into various specialities and super-specialities happened gradually during this second half of 20th century in India. The General Surgeon was the jack of all surgical specialities as per his inclinations and interest. Having joined the Stanley Medical College in 1955 as an undergraduate student, qualifying for MBBS degree and later taking up and qualifying in General Surgery and Plastic Surgery and even venturing into Laparoscopic Surgery till his voluntary retirement in 2004, the author has been in the midst of development of these various surgical specialities and sub-specialities. Though in private practice, the author joined as a medical teacher under the then existing Honorary Medical Service in Tamilnadu state in 1965. Starting as Honorary Assistant Professor in Stanley Medical College, he gradually rose to the position of Hon. Professor of Surgery and Hon. Chief in Surgery in Govt. Kilpauk Medical College and Govt. Royapettah Hospital, in Madras/Chennai from 1976 to 1996. The author has briefly touched upon medical education in India and his own experiences as a medical teacher for over 30 years. Compared to Medicine (Internal Medicine) private practice in Surgery is an entirely different cup of tea. The surgeon has to wait for a long time before people could trust him with his knife. The trials and tribulations in the professional career of a Surgeon in private practice have been highlighted in this book. In addition, several do-or-die situations and serious surgical complications are specifically described including how these situations were handled by the Surgeon are explained. Fortunately, doctors and surgeons were held in high respect and trusted by the lay public and malpractice litigations were few and far between. Another interesting aspect of surgical practice was that the types of diseases and surgical problems vary considerably in different geographical parts of India as experienced by the author while working in various other cities like Pondicherry, Lucknow and Delhi. Some aspects of selection for admission in Medical Colleges, of medical teaching and training of a surgeon are also mentioned briefly. Retirement of a Surgeon, a hotly debated subject, has been described in detail, giving the pros and cons and finally justifying his own relatively early retirement to pursue his hobbies like gardening, music and cooking. Devoting time for spiritual pursuits during the retirement period was another reason for a planned retirement. The author has finally described his own experiences, goals and plans for reaching the Supreme Spiritual goal. OM TAT SAT.

“Medical knowledge is not communicable to the natives of this country.” With these words, James McAdam, Secretary of the Medical Board of Bombay, sounded the death-knell in 1832 of the pioneering medical school set up in Bombay by Governor Mountstuart Elphinstone. Sir Robert Grant, appointed Governor of Bombay in 1834, disagreed, however. He aimed at ‘the general improvement of medical and surgical science and practice among the native practitioners’. With Dr Charles Morehead, he created a medical college superior to those in Calcutta, and Madras. Parsi philanthropist Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy single-handedly donated an entire hospital to complement this college. Graduates from these institutions, trained in scientific medicine of the highest standards, went on to serve their fellow countrymen with distinction. This book narrates how against great odds, Grant Medical College went on to rival medical colleges in Europe and America, and

Dr Morehead was invited to help improve medical education at the University of London. National Library of Medicine Audiovisuals Catalog Cambridge Scholars Publishing Giving this Nine Monthly manual, we all team members are very happy, as this will be very helpful to every aspirants in their current affairs norms, as well as for all competitive exams.
